CYPRESS PARK >>Two men in their 20s suffered non-life-threatening wounds Sunday in a shooting in Cypress Park, police said.

The gunfire erupted about 6:50 p.m. near the intersection of Arroyo Seco and French avenues, Los Angeles police Sgt. Frank Gutierrez said.

The victims were walking on the sidewalk when they were shot and that one was struck in an arm, the other in the buttocks and both were taken to a hospital for treatment, Gutierrez said.

Witnesses said they heard gunshots and saw two males running from the scene, but descriptions of the suspects were not available, the sergeant said.

It was not immediately clear if the shooting was gang-related, he said.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS — Councilman Gil Cedillo gathered with schoolchildren Monday at the intersection of North Broadway and Hancock streets in Lincoln Heights for the installation of a new traffic signal to improve safety.

The city requested a study of the intersection that showed more than 5,000 vehicles travel through daily. According to LAPD data, there has been 11 accidents resulting in injury in the past five years that involved four vehicle versus vehicle accidents, four vehicle versus pedestrian accidents and three vehicle versus bicyclist accidents. Lincoln Heights has its history of dangerous intersections, especially on Broadway.

Cedillo's office, along with the Department of Transportation, found the funding to design and install the signal.

The Highland Park Starbucks on York Boulevard

HIGHLAND PARK — The neighborhood's first Starbucks – aka “The Most Depressing Starbucks in America” – is finally going to start seeing some of the changes the coffee store chain promised last summer after the outlet's design met with heavy criticism.

Some residents have expressed their impatience by the lack of change at the York Boulevard outlet, a former hamburger stand that was converted into a drive-thru Starbucks last summer. “The communities are now left with the UGLIEST store ever built by Starbucks,” said Tina G. Miller in a Facebook comment. “When is the remodel going to happen???”

Starbucks spokeswoman Haley Drage said the remodel was delayed after it took longer than expected to receive the the necessary city permits. Those permits were issued at the end of last month, according to an online summary on the city's Department of Building & Safety website. Drage said the changes should be completed by the end of March.

While the Highland Park Starbucks will still lack an indoor seating area, the company pledged to make several changes following stories in The Eastsider and other media sites:

Additional storefront windows where customers order which will increase contact with employees. There will be one window to order and another to pick up.

Relocating and screening the bathroom door

Removing salvaged windows and installing roll-up doors

Converting the planter in front to sidewalk seating and creating two pedestrian entrances of the sidewalk.

Replacing the roll-up metal doors with two large recycled wood doors that slide barn door style.

Enhancing the side patio experience through a trellis and lighting

Drage said the company erred on designing a Starbucks focused on drive-thru customers instead of one that would cater to sit-down coffee drinkers. “We did not create the right experience for that neighborhood,” she said.

7 Celebrate Elephant Hill - Transfer of Ownership to MRCA 10 a.m., Tue

Tue Feb 10, 2015 9:48 pm (PST) . Posted by: asncaalert

Greetings Elephant Hill Supporters,

On behalf of the Elephant Hill Advisory Task Force* I am very pleased to invite you to a celebration of the City of LA's transfer of ownership of 5 acres on Elephant Hill to the Mountains Recreation and Conservation Authority (MRCA)!

We hope you will be able to join us to celebrate this historic victory. The sale of these parcels to the MRCA permanently protects a significant portion of Elephant Hill, one of the last remaining undeveloped hillsides in Northeast Los Angeles.

This victory is the culmination of a decades long struggle to stop a poorly designed residential development that threatened public health and safety, and would have destroyed an iconic El Sereno hillside. The successful protection of this land as open space is a testament to the hard work and determination of hundreds of community members, the leadership of Councilmember Jose Huizar and other elected officials, and support from key organizations including MRCA, the Natural Resources Defense Council and Chatten-Brown & Carstens among others.

What: Commemoration of the transfer of 5 acres on Elephant Hill to MRCA

When: 10 a.m., Tuesday, February 17, 2014

Where: Elephant Hill (at the end of Pullman St., east of Collis Ave.)

Who: Elephant Hill Advisory Task Force*

Los Angeles City Councilman Jose Huizar

Joe Edmiston, MRCA

Barbara Romero, Board of Public Works

Other invited guests:

Senator Kevin De Leon (invited)

Assemblymember Jimmy Gomez (invited)

Supervisor Hilda Solis (invited)

Please help us commemorate the occasion and thank the MRCA and the community leaders who made this victory a reality! Feel free to call if you have questions.

Thank you,

Elva Yanez

There is a rush and excitement to the biannual Brewery Art Colony Artwalk that is not easily replicated outside the confines of a county fair or street festival. Twice a year, the artists who live and work at this collection of repurposed warehouses, breweries, and electric plants off the Golden State Freeway open their doors to the curious. There is music, and delicious foods, whose smells permeate the air. A herd mentality prevails as you glide from one artist's loft to the next. The main focus is usually the art on display -- mixed-media installations, canvases thick with oil paint, and inscrutable live performances. But I have always been most fascinated by the rumpled bed pushed to the side of the studio, the toothbrush lying on the industrial sink next to some paintbrushes, the off-limits upstairs loft where I can spy a computer and books and a half-finished glass of whisky.

One day last week, I decided to take a mid-week, mid-afternoon stroll around the Brewery Art Colony. It sits in the hushed, Rust Belt-reminiscent area of Lincoln Heights, where diminutive, run-down Victorian homes stand side-by-side to abandoned commercial brownstones and small hipster businesses. Though the buildings at the Brewery are rough and industrial, in every other way it felt like I had stepped into a sleepy, close-knit rural town. In one repurposed loading dock, a few workers were spraying down signs and carrying them into an awaiting flatbed truck. A little further on, two men were sitting on the curb. One man was eating a sandwich, the other smoking a cigarette. I walked down a quiet makeshift street where an old man with long flowing hair sat at a picnic table, eyeing me curiously. In front of many of the studios there were inventive outdoor "front yards" of potted plants, flowering vines, statuary and garden chairs.

Barbara's, the colony's friendly on-site bar and restaurant, was sparsely populated. Most of the clientele sat chatting easily on the deck, like close co-workers or old friends. A man and woman were in deep discussion on a bench near the gazebo in the tiny, mid-complex park. Further on, a squirrel scurried across a row of brightly colored storage crates. The area in front of the famous Brewery smokestack was empty, until a mail-truck drove slowly down the otherwise deserted street. I watched as the mailman stepped out of his truck and begin to deliver packages door to door. He and I nodded as we passed, and I waved at a man sanding at an angulating table outside his workspace. As I walked out of this self-contained, vibrant world, I thought of the amazing feats of creativity that were occurring in the silent grey and brown buildings that surrounded me. Creativity doesn't just thrive in chaos, it also thrives in peace.

One of the busiest places in Los Angeles yesterday was the plant of the Los Angeles Brewing Company at 1920 North Main Street. There, lines of trucks blocks long were loaded by 500 extra workers, who labored all day and far into the night. Loaded trucks, guarded by government inspectors, were held in an ever-increasing battalion inside the brewery yards until the momentous 12:01 am released them into legitimate channels of trade. Charles J. Lick, manager of the brewery, estimated that approx. 260,000 cases of beer will move from his establishment on the first day. This does not include 1683 barrels of tap beer already ordered for delivery today. Some thirty railroad cars were also backed into the brewery yards for distribution as far north as San Francisco and as far east as the Middle West.

Hello Neighbor!

CD-14 Forums and More, Coming Up

It's election time here in Eagle Rock, which means there are all kinds of interesting and informative forums coming up -- along with some great community-building events that should be fun for Eagle Rockers of all ages. Read on for details.

City Council Debate This Thursday, Feb. 12

Tomorrow night, the ERNC will co-sponsor a lively Town Hall and Debate among the candidates for Eagle Rock's Council District 14, at Burbank Middle School. Why should you pay attention to this election? Because the City Council runs the City of LA, and Council staffers, who are hired by Councilmembers, are the city employees most people -- and most Neighborhood Councils -- interact with day-to-day. Flyer is at this link.

York Park Opens on Feb. 21

The new York Park, just over the Townsend/Ave 51 hill, opens on Feb. 21. (That was fast!) There's an all-day festival to celebrate that sounds like a lot of fun, and the ERNC will be there. More details on Facebook at this link.

Tree Care Event, Feb. 22 in Eagle Rock

Join us for what will hopefully become a regular tree-care event in Eagle Rock. The ERNC, along with Council District 14 and other neighborhood groups (see tree tag, below), planted 272 new street trees in Eagle Rock and Highland Park, and they need your help to keep growing strong. Come meet your neighbors, and make your neighborhood a better, greener place! RSVP for the event and more details at this link.

City Council Debate, Feb. 25 in Eagle Rock!

And on Wednesday, Feb. 25, there will be another Town Hall and Debate among the candidates for Council District 14, this time right here in Eagle Rock, at the Center for the Arts. Sponsored by the Eagle Rock Association (TERA), this one is not to be missed. So recycle those glossy mailers, and come out to see and hear the candidates, live and in person. Flyer is at this link.

If you have any questions at all about the ERNC, our meetings, or how to get involved in making Eagle Rock a better place, just send us an email at:

info@ernc.la

Ideas from the season's harvest

Vegetarian Red Flannel Hash

by Terri Wahl from "Auntie Em's Cookbook"

I love this beautiful and tasty spring dish because everything is made in a cast iron skillet in the oven. Traditionally, hash is made with corned beef, but this version is vegetarian. Dice all the vegetables uniformly so they cook evenly, and use the freshest eggs you can find.

Serves 4

- 1/4 cup plus 2 tbsp vegetable oil, divided
- 5 medium red potatoes, finely chopped
- 5 small beets, peeled and finely chopped
- 1 small yellow onion, finely chopped
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- Sea salt and freshly ground pepper
- 1/4 cup finely chopped flat-leaf parsley
- 2 tbsp finely chopped dill
- 4 large eggs

Preheat oven to 450 degrees and arrange rack in middle of oven.

Pour 1/4 cup oil into a large cast iron skillet. Place Skillet in oven until hot and oil is sizzling, about 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a large bowl, toss remaining 2 tablespoons oil with potatoes, beets, onion, and garlic. Sprinkle generously with salt and pepper and mix well, scraping brown bits from the bottom of the pan. Sprinkle with parsley and dill. Make 4 shallow, 30-inch indentations in the vegetables and crack an egg into each. Return skillet to oven and roast until eggs reach desired doneness, about 3 minutes for slightly runny eggs. Season with salt and pepper to tasted. Serve immediately.

Eat Real & Seasonal
Produce Delivery to Your Home

Know where your food comes from! California grows nearly 44 billion dollars worth of produce, accounting for nearly 80% of vegetables supplied to the country. The climate and resources enables year round farming of various crops. Over five years of drought is causing farms in the central valley to lose crops and hold back planting acreage, limited by supply of water and costs to use it.

This is where local, smaller farms play a role in diversifying our food supply. Various schools and institutions, as well communities are slowly reintroducing agriculture programs, developing once empty fields into food. Teaching students about work, commerce and fostering confidence.

The Auntie Em's Produce Delivery Basket promotes and support these farmers, bringing fresh and healthy food to your home. Each week we seek out local farmers, producing amazing crops in an urban environment. This summer season brings exciting and tasty vegetables to enjoy from Weiser Farms, Underwood Farms, South Central Farmer's Co-op, Chile Lily Garden and Tutti Frutti Farms.
